Students enjoy grand tour of Berlin

The German Cultural Center at around 100 or so students in the Max Kade Washinton, D.C., was greeted by German. An official visitor from East and all around the town. Students saw posters of Pope Benedict XVI, announcing his upcoming visits to the city. The house Phase of the Berlin elections was in full swing, and at one point Chancellor Merkel walked within arm’s length of the students. A side trip to Dresden and culture-filled nights rounded out the experience. Near departure, one student was heard to say, “Why aren’t I going back to Cincinnati?”

Other events included a visit to the Berlin Wall segment recently installed at the Eastside Gallery to the splendid Reichstag, from East to West and all around the town. The students told of why they “do Deutsch.”

By Richard Schade

During fall quarter, everyone was “doing Deutsch,” as turquoise T-shirts with bright orange “do Deutsch” logos. The German Embassy selected UC as a partner university for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.

Richard Schade made the street corners and plazas the experiential learning. Department’s students. Founded in 2001, the program group of 16 UC took desks in Linden for two weeks of experimental learning.
Meet DAAD Professor Tanja Nusser

Tanja Nusser talks with graduate students. Photo by Nick Roehl

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.

Department News

Katharina Gerstenberger, Professor and Head of the Department of German Studies, announced the upcoming faculty changes and the hiring of a new tenure-track faculty member in the fall newsletter.

We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member at the University of Cincinnati. Since 2010, our group has been growing, and we have continued to add new members each year. We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member in the field of German and French studies. We are looking for a candidate with expertise in language and culture, as well as a commitment to teaching and research.

In the meantime, we have welcomed our new faculty member in the fall. She has been with us for a few months and has already begun to make a significant contribution to the department. She has been working with students and teaching several courses, and she has already started to develop new research projects. We are very excited to have her on our team and look forward to seeing her contributions to the department.

Student sends greetings from Austria

Kathryn Porter, a master's student, is on a Fulbright teaching assistantship in Austria. She writes to say that she is enjoying her time there and that she is learning a lot about the culture and language.

My professor in Austria can be owed to the American-Austrian Foundation, which provides scholarships to students who wish to study in Austria. I am grateful to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to study in Austria and to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to share my experiences with others.

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.

Department News

Katharina Gerstenberger, Professor and Head of the Department of German Studies, announced the upcoming faculty changes and the hiring of a new tenure-track faculty member in the fall newsletter.

We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member at the University of Cincinnati. Since 2010, our group has been growing, and we have continued to add new members each year. We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member in the field of German and French studies. We are looking for a candidate with expertise in language and culture, as well as a commitment to teaching and research.

In the meantime, we have welcomed our new faculty member in the fall. She has been with us for a few months and has already begun to make a significant contribution to the department. She has been working with students and teaching several courses, and she has already started to develop new research projects. We are very excited to have her on our team and look forward to seeing her contributions to the department.

Student sends greetings from Austria

Kathryn Porter, a master's student, is on a Fulbright teaching assistantship in Austria. She writes to say that she is enjoying her time there and that she is learning a lot about the culture and language.

My professor in Austria can be owed to the American-Austrian Foundation, which provides scholarships to students who wish to study in Austria. I am grateful to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to study in Austria and to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to share my experiences with others.

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.

Department News

Katharina Gerstenberger, Professor and Head of the Department of German Studies, announced the upcoming faculty changes and the hiring of a new tenure-track faculty member in the fall newsletter.

We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member at the University of Cincinnati. Since 2010, our group has been growing, and we have continued to add new members each year. We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member in the field of German and French studies. We are looking for a candidate with expertise in language and culture, as well as a commitment to teaching and research.

In the meantime, we have welcomed our new faculty member in the fall. She has been with us for a few months and has already begun to make a significant contribution to the department. She has been working with students and teaching several courses, and she has already started to develop new research projects. We are very excited to have her on our team and look forward to seeing her contributions to the department.

Student sends greetings from Austria

Kathryn Porter, a master's student, is on a Fulbright teaching assistantship in Austria. She writes to say that she is enjoying her time there and that she is learning a lot about the culture and language.

My professor in Austria can be owed to the American-Austrian Foundation, which provides scholarships to students who wish to study in Austria. I am grateful to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to study in Austria and to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to share my experiences with others.

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.

Department News

Katharina Gerstenberger, Professor and Head of the Department of German Studies, announced the upcoming faculty changes and the hiring of a new tenure-track faculty member in the fall newsletter.

We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member at the University of Cincinnati. Since 2010, our group has been growing, and we have continued to add new members each year. We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member in the field of German and French studies. We are looking for a candidate with expertise in language and culture, as well as a commitment to teaching and research.

In the meantime, we have welcomed our new faculty member in the fall. She has been with us for a few months and has already begun to make a significant contribution to the department. She has been working with students and teaching several courses, and she has already started to develop new research projects. We are very excited to have her on our team and look forward to seeing her contributions to the department.

Student sends greetings from Austria

Kathryn Porter, a master's student, is on a Fulbright teaching assistantship in Austria. She writes to say that she is enjoying her time there and that she is learning a lot about the culture and language.

My professor in Austria can be owed to the American-Austrian Foundation, which provides scholarships to students who wish to study in Austria. I am grateful to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to study in Austria and to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to share my experiences with others.

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.

Department News

Katharina Gerstenberger, Professor and Head of the Department of German Studies, announced the upcoming faculty changes and the hiring of a new tenure-track faculty member in the fall newsletter.

We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member at the University of Cincinnati. Since 2010, our group has been growing, and we have continued to add new members each year. We are currently in the process of hiring a new tenure-track faculty member in the field of German and French studies. We are looking for a candidate with expertise in language and culture, as well as a commitment to teaching and research.

In the meantime, we have welcomed our new faculty member in the fall. She has been with us for a few months and has already begun to make a significant contribution to the department. She has been working with students and teaching several courses, and she has already started to develop new research projects. We are very excited to have her on our team and look forward to seeing her contributions to the department.

Student sends greetings from Austria

Kathryn Porter, a master's student, is on a Fulbright teaching assistantship in Austria. She writes to say that she is enjoying her time there and that she is learning a lot about the culture and language.

My professor in Austria can be owed to the American-Austrian Foundation, which provides scholarships to students who wish to study in Austria. I am grateful to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to study in Austria and to the American-Austrian Foundation for the opportunity to share my experiences with others.

In September 2011, I joined the Department of German Studies at the University of Cincinnati, working with the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst—German Academic Exchange Service). The DAAD is one of the largest organizations of its kind in the world, providing scholarships to students and grants to professors from the United States to work and teach in Germany. I was thrilled to be named a DAAD professor, and I was very much looking forward to meeting with students to discuss German literature and culture while fostering the friendships and networks that are the hallmark of this project. The DAAD professorship is one of the highest honors I could receive, and I am very grateful for this opportunity to connect with students and foster their development. I am also grateful to the DAAD for its support of the project.