Toastmasters International is a professional organization that promotes member improvement in communication and leadership. It has more than 345,000 members from more than 15,900 clubs across more than 144 countries around the globe. Members improve their speaking and leadership skills by attending and participating in the club meetings.

Bearcat Toastmasters Club is one of the clubs within Toastmasters International. It was chartered in 1999 as an open/community club by University of Cincinnati employees. As an open club it accepts membership, not only from the University community, but also from the surrounding community at-large. It has fluid membership since members may come and go depending on their goals and their work situations. The club has an interesting mix of diverse individuals – university faculty members and students from different colleges, university staff, professionals, and business employees from around the Greater Cincinnati area.
