

Rolling Rocks

Today's Colloquium

Today's colloquium will be given by Dr. Lixin Wang from Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis. His talk starts at 3:30 pm in Braunstein 201 and is titled: "Ecohydrology in water-stressed environments". There will be refreshments in the Rug Room following his talk.

SOMETHING NEW THIS WEEK. There will be coffee and tea before the colloquium, in addition to the normal refreshments afterwards. This will be set up outside 201 Braunstein 10-15 minutes before the talk starts, so come by a few minutes early if you can. Please bring your own cup if you have one.

Careers Days

The Careers Days went really well last week. The talks by our alumni and Julia Montier-Ball from our career center were fascinating and we all learnt an incredible amount. Thanks to everyone who helped out, especially Kate, Sarah, Emily and Krista. Special thanks to John Thaeler for initiating and organizing the Careers Days. Thank you John. Below are some of our visitors and faculty discussing transferable skills at the Rookwood Bar and Restaurant.

New Grant

Congratulations to Liz Orr who just received a grant from the National Geographic Society's Committee for Research and Exploration in the amount of $5,000 to support her proposed project titled: "The interaction between climate and erosion in high mountain environments: the affect of precipitation gradients upon headwall erosion in Northern India, NW Himalaya." Well-done Liz!

GeoClub Trip

The Undergraduate Geology Club will be running a field trip to Hoosier National Forest in Indiana to look for geodes this coming Sunday. They will carpool and meet at the geology loading dock at 9 am. You will need to bring lunch, money for dinner, hammer and appropriate clothes (layers, rain gear).

[illegible]

Cheers,

Lewis