Africana Studies

Africana Studies majors use a variety of approaches to explore and better understand the experiences of African, African American, Afro-Latin, Afro-Caribbean and Afro-European populations in a global context. This interdisciplinary major employs analytical tools from fields such as sociology, psychology, literature, anthropology, politics and history to explore important social issues facing people of African descent, from continental Africa and throughout the African Diasporas.

"I've always had a passion for social sciences and looking at the bigger problems in our world. I knew that a degree from A&S would lead me to the career of my dreams. I have received a tremendous amount of support and guidance from the A&S faculty and advisors. They are available for help outside of the classroom and act as my own personal team of professional coaches and motivators. My experience in A&S has helped shape my view of my personal responsibility to make a positive change in my community. Upon graduation I hope to earn my Master's and Doctorate. My long-term goal is to start a non-profit organization dedicated to solving some of the socio-economic issues in the African-American community."
