Classics / Classical Civilization

Classics is the study of the language and literature of ancient Greece and Rome. Classics majors eventually read Homer, Plato or the New Testament, and Cicero, Virgil or Augustine in the original. Classical Civilization is the study of the culture, history, language and literature of ancient Greece and Rome. Classical Civilization majors enrich their lives through an interdisciplinary exploration of the Greek and Roman worlds. Both Classics and Classical Civilization majors develop language skills and study mythology, philosophy, religion, politics and other areas where the ancient Greeks and Romans made decisive contributions to world civilization.

"When I learned that the A&S Classics Department was one of the best in the country, with professors from around the world and an extensive classics library, I knew I would be getting one of the best Classics educations. I wanted to have a well-rounded humanities education, and having the opportunity to take classes from all areas of A&S was a huge plus. Each class I've had has encouraged close relations between the students and the professors. Faculty is incredibly welcoming and has student growth at the forefront of their minds. I plan on pursuing a degree in historic preservation with a long-term goal of receiving my PhD in Arts Administration and becoming a museum director."
