"After meeting with faculty and my advisor, I had no doubt that A&S was where I needed to be. They were all very helpful and honest when answering my questions, making me feel like I was part of a community. I left the country for the first time to embark on a study abroad program in Spain and was also a peer leader to exploratory students. There is diversity in both the student body and the range of studies. I was exposed to so many different cultures and ideas, ultimately making me a more open-minded and accepting individual. Following graduation, my goal is to become a Foreign Service Officer in the State Department."
